Imperial Missourt.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. When Congressman Clark apostrophized imperial Missouri he imbedded a great truth in the language of poetic fervor. Her greatness needs no proof, but shines in her growing prosperity. Some facts, however, garnered from the Manual of Missouri for the current year, just issued by Secretary of State Lesueur, and which, by the way, is an exceptionally valuable handbook of carefully compiled statistics, and information of a general character, are useful to impress the particulars of Missouri's greatness on the public mind.

Missouri is the fifth state in population and the eighth in assessed valuation. Her total population according to the eleventh census is 2,676,184, a gain of 23.26 per cent in ten years. The total assessed valuation of taxable property is $847,907,121, which is three times as much as it was at the close of the

The area of the state is 900 square miles larger than that of Maine, Massachusetts, Connectict, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island and Delaware combined. In all this vast area there is not a mile of desert land, and by reason of the remarkable variety of its agricultural and mineral product it can not only support ten times its present population but can come nearer to supplying all its wants than any other equal area in the world.

Missouri has wonderful resources in minerals, the production of which is yet in its infancy. The state now ranks first in the production of zinc and second in the production of lead, with a bright prospect of taking first place in the near future. It is rich in iron ore and in coal beds, and contains a great abundance of other ores and glass sands.

Missouri has a vast abundance of the finest clays suitable for manufacturing and exhaustless stores of building stone. In variety and abundance of mineral springs she is not surpassed by any other state.

CANDIDATES, ATTENTION.

CANDIDATES for office are already arranging for the city and county campaigns of 1894, and we desire to call their attention to the following from the Columbia Herald:

In advance of the opening of the campaign the attention of all aspirants for office is directed to a matter which intimately concerns them. At the last session of the Missouri general assembly a law known as "the corrupt practice act" was enacted. It seeks to prevent bribery, corruption and undue influence at elections and applies both to the primary as well as the general election and to all nominating conventions.
